

PENNSYLVANIA

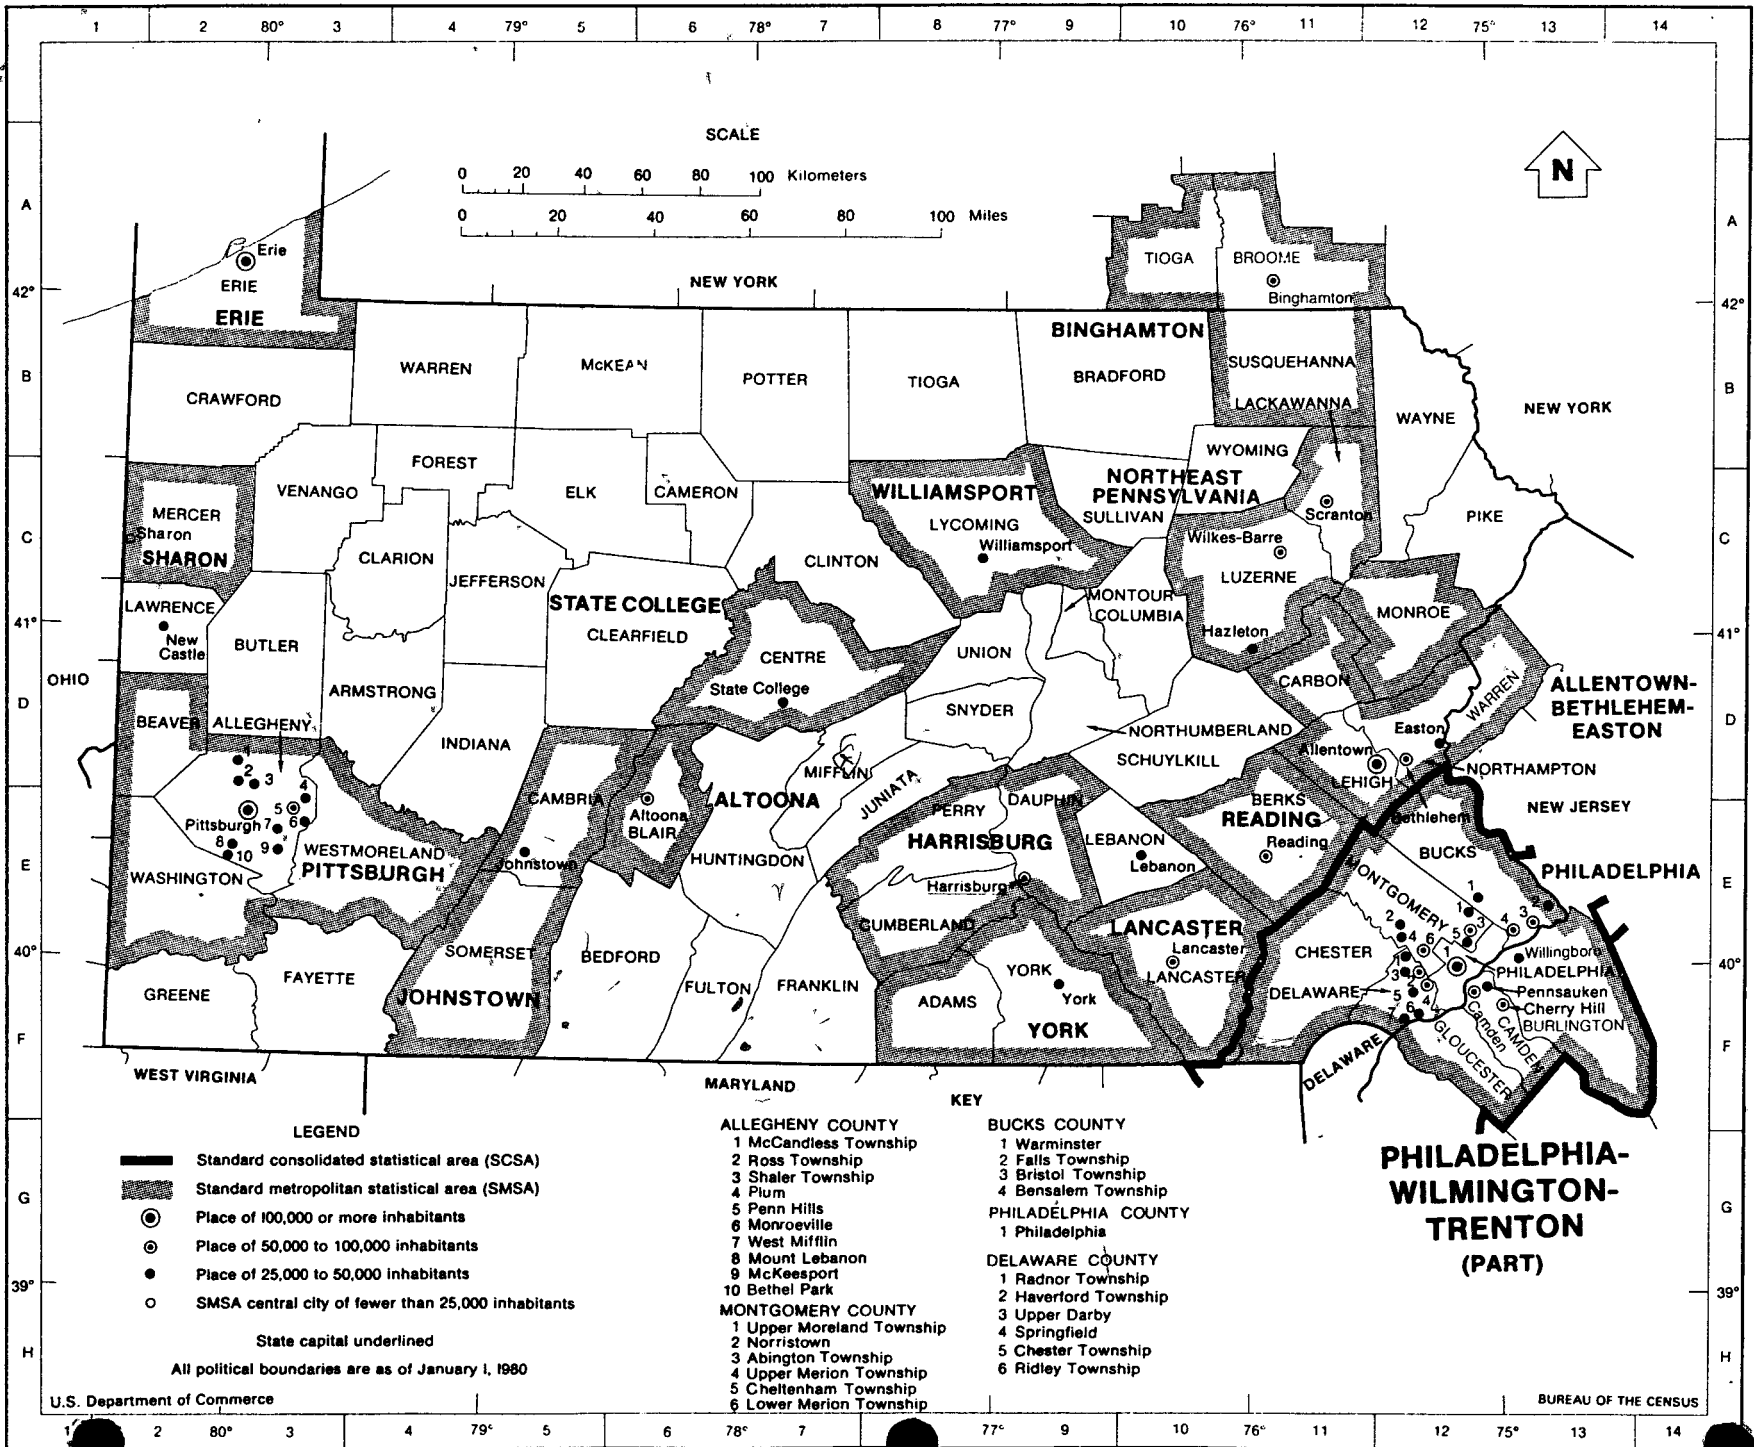

MINOR CIVIL DIVISIONS

The primary divisions of the counties in Pennsylvania are the townships, cities, boroughs, and one town (Bloomsburg). Philadelphia City is coextensive with Philadelphia County. The Complanter Indian Reservation is also classified as a primary division. There are no secondary divisions. Township governments are divided into two classes. Townships of the the first class are those having a population density of 300 or more per square mile; all other townships are second class. Change from second to first class is subject to referendum. First class townships are urban in nature, frequently perform functions similar to those of cities and boroughs, and are governed by elected boards of commissioners. Townships of the second class serve rural areas and have elected boards of supervisors.

MUNICIPALITIES

Municipal governments in Pennsylvania are the cities, boroughs, and one incorporated town (Bloomsburg). To become a city, a minimum population of 10,000 is required but a change from borough to city status is subject to referendum. The following classes, based on population size, apply to cities:

- First class - 1,000,000 inhabitants or more
- Second class - 500,000 to 1,000,000 inhabitants
- Second class A - 135,000 to 500,000 inhabitants
- Third class - less than 135,000 inhabitants.
